Final Reflection

This final project was very interesting, as in working with a group. Many would disagree because of communication. However, this was no issue for our group. Everyone did their assigned work well and participated. The motivation behind the project was to do what we can to help Earth, not completely heal, but hopefully plateau the situation of global warming by direct relation of road salt affecting the trees. The purpose behind the invention is to propose a new way of keeping trees safe instead of replanting them, which will cost more. The audience for this project is the future generation of engineers, who can hopefully take this idea and make it into a reality. Although the presentation was not too extravagant, the idea behind it was to look optimistically into the future. Overall, this assignment helped me with socializing with my classmates, editing/proofreading, and using online databases.
